When I came to this city thirty-three years ago, our city jail was 14x16, one story high, but we have I saw a weird pleture of ice: jail was 14x16, one story high, but we have progressed, and things are very different now. It is not possible for me here to enumerate all that I conceive to be useless and injurious. What I started out to say was to give to your renders a little old English history: Once upon a time, the queen was making a tour of the hand of a mortal could paint. It seemed of so quaint a device. No touch of the hand of a mortal could paint. First bold in its outlines, then tender and faint, like a spirit, it melted in air. jects turned out like we did to see General Grant, and some one of the speakers said to the queen: "We men of Coventry are glad to see your royal highness; good Lord! how fair you be." When the maiden queen responded:
"You men of Coventry, our highness is glad to see Good Lord! what jook you be!"
How things have changed!
